

What does a front end developer do

- Front-end developer creates designs, websites and applications, using HTML, CSS and Javascript
- They

Where to place the elements of the website So determine it's easy to navigate for the user Front-end developers earn 88.000 $/year (and)
The demand for this job is growing The job can be flexible, you can work on your own, for a company, or for a non-profit organisation.

Because you work on the computer, you can work across the country or the globe. This career increases your creativity and problem-solving skills. The skills you want to have as a front-end developer are the 3 languages (HTML, CSS and JavaScript), understanding the Frameworks for the languages and understanding how to use different software.

If you want to learn front-end development, you can take online courses such as introduction to web development and responsive web development.